This analytical study examines the function of internal auditing from the viewpoint of its role within organizations and within the economics of societies and governments. Swanson and Marsh place internal auditing in the context of the scientific conceptual framework of Living Systems Theory, and thus provide a basis for a systematic theoretical framework and a theory based on observable, measurable entities. They identify the advantages of using this system to advance the knowledge and understanding of organizations,

"Given the common acknowledgement that strategy implementation is the greatest challenge to managers in the 21st century and the greatest reason for strategy failure we decided to focus on strategy implementation. Rather than promoting the unrealistic idea of strategy as a purely rational and deliberate outcome, this book acknowledges and explores the idea that strategy is often emergent, messy and experimental and features a number of new chapters, focusing on strategy implementation and change
