If the purpose of your excursion is to do something other than share your interests or get to know each other, it's not a date. An example would be going to the mall to buy something, eating at a restaurant because someone's hungry, or going to the library to study. #3 Did it happen out of nowhere? It could be a date, but it's more likely that the person you're going out with just wants to do something spontaneous, and you were the only person they could think of.
